CITY OF DUBLIN.

The Moore Memorial Concert took place in the Royal University building on Saturday night, and was a great success.

A man whose identity is unknown jumped overboard from the steamship Eblana on her voyage from Liverpool to Dublin on Wednesday. He was drowned and the body was not recovered.

On Thursday in the police court Kate Locks of 30 Lower Gardiner street was summoned to show cause why pirated copies of certain musical works should not be destroyed or delivered up. An order was made that the pirate music be given up.

A meeting of the parishioners of Drumcondra was held on Sunday to further the collection of funds in aid of the completion of the new Church of St. Columba. His Grace the Archbishop of Dublin presided and delivered two speeches.

A society known as the Dublin Society for the Protection of Birds, has just been formed with the object of directing public attention to the destruction of wild birds, as well as to protest against the wearing of egret plumes and other forms of bird decoration in millinery.

At the meeting of North Dublin Guardians last week a letter was read from the "Cumann nan Gneadh" enclosing the resolution adopted by that body protesting against the handing over of the principal streets to the English soldiers at night. A motion that the resolution enclosed with the letter be adopted was passed.

On Thursday evening, while a child named Alfred Murray, aged 6, residing at 6 Merville terrace, Fairview, was running across the roadway at Merville avenue, it was accidentally knocked down and injured by a cyclist. The injured child was conveyed to Jervis street hospital by constable 119 C, where an examination by Dr. J. J. Ryan, house surgeon, it was found to have received a compound fracture of the right leg, and after treatment was removed to the Children's hospital, Temple street.

ALL AROUND IRELAND.

Owing to ill health, Mr. William Kiedy, master of the Waterford workhouse, has resigned his position.

On Friday afternoon a woman named Agnes Reid, who resided at Tullynacross, near Lisburn, was found dead in bed. She resided alone.

The Most Rev. Dr. Sheehan, bishop of Waterford and Lismore, was on Thursday presented with an address from the Clonmel corporation, and the freedom of the borough, on his return from the Holy Land.

A conference of members of the United Irish League was held at Westport on Thursday. Mr. Grimes, D. C., presiding. Mr. John O'Donnell, M. P., was present, and a message was delivered by Mr. Barry from Mr. William O'Brien.

On Thursday a conference was held of the people of Ennisconry, with a view to the establishment of an industry in the town and a committee was appointed to confer with the representative of the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction.

A Dundalk telegram states that three lads were thrown from a roller to which a horse was attached at Knockbridge on Saturday evening through the animal suddenly moving. One, named Maguire, was crushed to death, the others being badly injured.

Early on Sunday morning the house of Mr. James Markby of Gurtlandree was broken into, an entrance having been effected through the kitchen window, and property to the extent of 14 pounds, which included two silver watches and a gold watch, abstracted.

The proceedings of the eleventh annual Irish Trades' Congress concluded on Wednesday at Kilkenny. Among the resolutions proposed was one recommending to the Trades Unions of Ireland affiliation with the Labour Representation Committee to promote the formation of independent representation in Ireland. The resolution was passed by 41 votes to 14. It was decided to hold next year's congress in Wexford.

Hon. Edward Blake, M. P., addressed a large and enthusiastic meeting of his constituents on Sunday in the Square, Longford, dealing principally with the administration of the land acts. Mr. Blake announced he was retiring from his professional work. Mr. J. P. Farrell and Mr. J. P. Hayden, M. P., also spoke.

It is with regret we announce the death of Mr. D. R. O'Callaghan, J. P., which took place on Sunday at his residence, Brackenstown, Swords. Deceased was a well known breeder of high-class horses, including General Peace, General Cronje, Conqueror Hero, Oppressor, etc. The remains will be removed for interment to Clonsilla, County Cork, tomorrow.

On Friday Dr. Heron, J. P., coroner for South Down, held an inquest on the body of Mr. Edward Collins, Edward street, Newry, an independent gentleman of middle age, who died suddenly on Thursday night. Dr. S. Edgar Martin deposed that he was called upon to examine the body. He found no marks upon it. In his opinion death was due to cerebral apoplexy. The jury then returned a verdict in accordance with the medical testimony.

A dispatch from Castleisland on Monday says: An alarming fire broke out at 5 o'clock this morning on the premises of Mr. Dan O'Callaghan, merchant, Castleisland. In a few minutes the fire had spread to the adjoining houses, and the entire block was threatened, including the police barracks. The constabulary and the townspeople worked with commendable promptitude and pluck, and after a couple of hours' hard work the fire was got under control, but not before damage to the extent of about £700 was done. The office of Mr. Meredith, solicitor, was completely destroyed. The damage is partly covered by insurance.

A dispatch from Limerick on Friday says: About 3 o'clock this morning Night Watchman Kelly noticed flames issuing from the rear of the extensive premises occupied by Messrs. Kidd Bros., 3 and 4 George's street. The alarm was given and the constabulary from William street and the fire brigade were soon on the scene. The fire had caught a firm hold on a sweet factory at the back of the shop, and this was gutted. Mr. E. Kidd and his family, who live over the shop, were aroused, and made their escape in good time. Cruise's hotel, which adjoins Messrs. Kidd's premises, was at one time threatened, but the flames were confined to the place first mentioned, and after an hour the fire was got under control. The damage, which was considerable, was covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is unknown.

IMPENDING EVICTIONS IN KERRY.

At the fortnightly meeting of the Killybegs Board of Guardians, the following eviction notices were read: "William L. Stokes and another v. Thomas Spillane and Mary Spillane, for possession of part of the lands of Callenymore; Daniel McGillicuddy v. Thomas McKenna, for possession of a dwelling house at Milltown; Killybegs Rural Council v. John Ferris, Lyne, Coors, McCrohan, Clonmore and John Murphy, Ballyboughtragh for possession of labourers' cottages."

WHIRLED TO DEATH AT LIMERICK.

A shocking fatality took place on Saturday at the bacon curing stores of Messrs. Matterson & Sons, Limited, Limerick. It would appear that an employee in the sausage factory named William Young, aged 19, was in the act of throwing a belt off a pulley, when, through some mishap, his clothes got entangled in the machinery, and he was whirled round and received terrible injuries to his legs and body. The machinery was stopped with all speed and the boy extricated, but he lived only a few minutes. An inquest was formally opened in the afternoon and adjourned.

PRIESTS AND PEOPLE IN CONNEMARA.

A dispatch from Clifden on Thursday says: The home-coming of the Very Rev. Canon McAlpine, P. P., V. C., Clifden, from Rome, was made the occasion today of a demonstration of welcome and rejoicing amongst his parishioners. Long before the train arrived the platform and its approaches were crowded to their utmost extent. As the train was steaming in the new brass band played "Come Back to Erin." When the Canon alighted on the platform, cheer after cheer came forth from the purging crowd, which was continued for some time. Outside the station a carriage was in readiness, into which the Very Rev. Canon was conducted. Amidst the cheers of the people, and headed by the brass band, he was escorted to his residence, where an address of welcome on the part of the parishioners was read by Mr. J. T. A. Morris, J. P.

Canon McAlpine made a most feeling reply. Mr. Michael Joyce, Co. C., in a few appropriate words, expressed his gratification at being made the medium of presenting Canon McAlpine with a check for £120 as a small token of their esteem and regard. Canon McAlpine said: "I gratefully accept your gift on one condition—that the penny of it will never enter my pocket, but that you will permit me to devote it to your church to the erection of an altar or a stained glass window that will serve as a memento of today's proceedings and of the kindly relations subsisting between priests and people here."

To this course universal exception was taken, but as the Canon remained inexorable the people finally assented.

DROWNED IN GAYWAY BAY.

A dispatch from Galway on Tuesday says: Yesterday was the beginning of Galway May Fair, and thousands of country people flocked into the town. From Twain, a little village on the other side of Galway bay, where ten men were drowned this week two years while boating, several families attended, coming in in the morning by boat. Several of them left for home in the evening, amongst whom were two men named Walsh and Cunniffe, who had a boat between them. They left the docks at about eight in the evening, and when near the lighthouse, in the center of the bay, the boat capsized. The men struggled bravely, but no help arrived till half an hour after the occurrence, when John Belton, a trawler, living in Fairhill, happened to see the capsized boat and the two men hanging to it. He went to the rescue. Before he arrived, however, Walsh had disappeared. Cunniffe was still clinging to the upturned boat in an insensible condition, and it was with difficulty that Belton managed to get Cunniffe transferred to his own boat. Cunniffe, after restoratives had been applied, recovered. The body of Walsh was found some time after.

SHOCKING OCCURRENCE AT ENNISCONRY.

A dispatch from Ennisconry on Friday says: Today a shocking occurrence took place in Ennisconry by which a young man named Cornelius Delaney, aged 17, met with instantaneous death. The deceased was an apprentice in the well known foundry works of Mr. Jessop Davis. On returning after breakfast he was left in temporary charge of the planing machine, and during his operations here he was struck by some portion of the moving engine and knocked insensible into the pit which receives the steel dust. The machine pierced the brain, and death must immediately have ensued.

ARMAGH CATHEDRAL—THE POPE REPRESENTED.

The Pope has decided to send Cardinal Vincenzo Vannutelli to Ireland to preside as his representative at the consecration of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Armagh, on July 24. Whilst the Cardinal is in the British Isles he hopes to visit the new Westminster Cathedral.

The following members of the English hierarchy have intimated their intention of being present at the solemn consecration of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Armagh, on Sunday, the 24th of July, in addition to those prelates whose names have already appeared: Most Rev. Dr. Bourne, Archbishop of Westminster; Most Rev. Dr. Whitehead, Bishop of Liverpool; Most Rev. Dr. Halsey, Bishop of Birmingham; Most Rev. Dr. Cahill, Bishop of Portsmouth; Most Rev. Dr. Walsh, Archbishop of Dublin, will celebrate the Pontifical High Mass, and Most Rev. Dr. Healy, Archbishop of Tuam, will preach on the occasion.

CAPTAIN DROWNED.

Dr. Sellars held an inquest on the body of Captain Quan, who was drowned about a fortnight ago near Narrow-water, Warrenpoint, while attempting to swim across the lough at night to visit his father, who resided near Omagh. The evidence adduced at the inquest went to show that the unfortunate man, John Quan, who was only about 26 years of age, and unmarried, left his vessel on the morning of tragedy, and went home to visit his people at Lislea, on the lough shore, almost opposite Warrenpoint. At about 6 o'clock he returned to go to his ship, and at the spot where he left the boat by which he crossed the lough he met his brother, William Quan, whom he told to be on the lookout for him, as he would probably be coming home again. The brother did so, waiting on the shore until about 10:30 for the whistle call of his brother, so that he could take over the boat for him, but, thinking that his brother was not coming, he went home at the time stated. Next morning, in company with a man called John Mateer, he started for the ship, on which he and Mateer were also employed. On getting to the other side of the lough they found the captain's clothes. In the clothes were a watch and chain, fifteen shillings and some letters from his mother. Beside the clothes lay a bottle. Great sympathy is felt for the deceased's relatives. His family are most respectable, well to do people, and are popular all round the district. The sadness of the tragedy is intensified by the fact of the deceased's youth, and his having attained so high a position as to hold a captain's certificate at so early an age. He was a fine, genial, big fellow, six feet high, and proportionately broad. A verdict of "found drowned" was returned.

PLUCKY RESCUE IN CORK.

A lad named Daniel Hallisey, residing at 10 Cockpit lane, off the Coal quay, Cork, possesses quite a record for rescuing people from drowning, and his feat in that connection off Killybegs quay on Tuesday makes the fifth in the list of rescues. Some children were playing on a ship between the Coal quay and Killybegs quay about 3 o'clock, when one of them—a little lad of about 7 years, fell in and drifted out some distance in the river. Hallisey, who was about the place, noticed an alarm being made from the opposite side of the river, and he rushed to the quay wall, and, without divesting himself of any clothes, jumped in and swam after the little fellow, who, by this time, was in a helpless and precarious condition in the water. He reached him none too soon, and brought him out in a faint condition. It seems strange that such a chapter of rescues as this lad Hallisey can put to his credit should escape the notice of the Royal Humane Society.

POLICEMAN ATTACKED BY A HORSE.

A dispatch from Limerick on Tuesday says: Constable Morrissey, Limerick, along with Constable Forde and a few civilians, entered a field at Boherbue on Monday for the purpose of securing a horse which had attacked several people, and in doing so the animal turned upon Morrissey and hit him severely on the hands and head. The enraged animal was about making a second charge at his victim, but it was fortunately frustrated by the horse being got under control. Constable Morrissey was taken to Barrington's hospital, where his wounds were dressed, and it was found necessary to detain him in the institution.

BISHOP LUDDEN'S VISITS TO CASTLEBAR.

A letter was received in Syracuse, N. Y., from Ireland, stating that great preparations were being made for the reception of Right Rev. Bishop Patrick A. Ludden of that city by the people of Castlebar, his native parish. The Bishop is expected to be in Ireland early in June, when he will observe the fortieth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood by celebrating Mass at the beautiful marble altar which he donated to the new church in Castlebar a few years ago.

THE VACANT SEES OF KERRY AND KILLALOE.

Their Lordships the Bishops of Cork, Galway, Cloyne, Waterford and Ross met at the Palace, Thurle, on Thursday, under the presidency of his grace the Most Rev. Dr. Fennelly, Archbishop of Cashel, to consider the candidates for the vacant dioceses of Killaloe and Kerry.

The deliberations were conducted in private. The report of their lordships will be forwarded in the usual way to his eminence the Cardinal Prefect of Propaganda.

The Bishops returned by the evening train.

A WELCOME HOME.

A very touching and interesting scene was witnessed at the Christian Brothers' schools, Lismore, when a cordial and hearty welcome home was given to the venerable and respected Parish Priest, Archdeacon McGrath, on his return from a pilgrimage to the Holy Land and a visit to Rome and our Holy Father. One of the large class rooms was very tastefully decorated with drapery and flowers, and a large scroll bearing the words "Welcome Home Our Very Dear Pastor from the Holy Land" occupied a central place at the head of the hall. At 12 o'clock the Archdeacon arrived and was received with a spontaneous burst of joyous greetings, all present rising and cheering him with loud cries of "Welcome home," the heartiness and warmth of which affected him. Master A. Darragh read a very appropriate address, and the Archdeacon replied in very touching terms, thanking the Christian Brothers and their pupils and the friends around him for the very cordial welcome given him. He then delivered a most interesting lecture, describing in very happy language the many wonderful scenes he had witnessed during his journey.

PRESENTATION NUN DEAD.

The Solemn Office and Requiem High Mass for the repose of the soul of the late Sister Mary Benignus of the Carlow Community of the Presentation Order, were celebrated on Tuesday in the convent chapel. The deceased lady died early on Saturday morning, just eight days after the commencement of her illness and eight months to the day since she and her younger sister, Mary Albens, received their white veils. In the schools, where he labored, in a great part, lay, she was the idol of the children, and also of an Irish speaker she had lit up enthusiasm in many a young mind for the revival of the Gaelic tongue. The funeral took place on Sunday.

At the Solemn Office the Most Rev. Dr. Foley, attended by Rev. John Delaney, P. P., Rathvilly, presided. Rev. P. Nagle, brother of the deceased, sang the Requiem High Mass, with Rev. Father Marshall as deacon, and Rev. Father Nagle as sub-deacon. The Rev. Dean Brophy officiated as master of ceremonies.

IRISH EXHIBITION DEDICATED.

Last Saturday the grounds and buildings of the Irish Industrial Exhibition at the Worlds Fair were thronged with crowds of people anxious to participate in the demonstration which marked the opening of Ireland's first exposition of her products in a foreign land. There was no mistaking the national character of the project. Floating proudly, between the Stars and Stripes and the Louisiana colors, was the green banner of Erin emblazoned with the golden harp. It was not the usual Italian instrument seen on Irish flags, either. The harp was as truly Celtic as the genius which inspired it. No British ensign was there. Over the Irish house of parliament, St. Lawrence's gate, Blarney castle and even better still, the immense building devoted to the industries and arts, there was but one foreign banner, the Irish flag.

The crowd was a representative one. Dignitaries of the church, United States senators, congressmen and civic officials mingled with an assemblage in which were Irishmen who held high place in the world of commerce and science. All were happy. Their motherland was sending forth a display which made their hearts beat high with pride, and they were there to hail the dawn of a new era in Irish national life.

The dedication ceremonies were held in the theatre. Nearly 2,000 people were present. On the stage were his grace, the Most Rev. John J. Glennon, Archbishop of St. Louis, Hon. David R. Francis, president of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition; Hon. Rolla Wells, mayor of St. Louis; T. P. Gill, secretary of the department of agriculture and technical instruction for Ireland; Rev. Timothy Dempsey, Thomas F. Hanley, president of the Irish Exhibit company; Hon. Thomas Carter of Montana, president of the United States commission; Edward Hearn, Supreme Knight of the Knights of Columbus; T. W. Rolleston and J. Clifton Hill of Dublin, together with many prominent priests and laymen.

Mr. Edward Devoy opened the proceedings with a short address in which he reviewed the objects of the meeting, and he called upon Rev. Timothy Dempsey—state chaplain of the A. O. H. to invoke a blessing on the enterprise. The entire audience arose and a profound silence ensued during which Father Dempsey eloquently besought a blessing from the Most High on Ireland and her industries. Addresses were then made by Hon. Rolla Wells and Hon. David R. Francis in which these gentlemen paid high tribute to the Irish Exhibition and to Mr. Hanley, its promoter. Mr. Francis said he considered the Louisiana Purchase Exposition the most universal of any that had ever been held, inasmuch that it had the first distinctively Irish Industrial Exposition that had been organized. He was astonished at the richness and extent of the varied industries here displayed, and felt that the Louisiana Purchase Exposition was under a debt of gratitude to Ireland for giving it an exhibit which was one of its most interesting features of the grounds.

The oration of the day was delivered by Archbishop Glennon of St. Louis. As he arose to speak the great assemblage arose like a single person and the air was rent by cheers and acclamations. Men flung their hats in the air and shouted themselves hoarse, while women, unable to make themselves heard above the din, were content to wave their handkerchiefs vigorously. It was a reception which attested the popularity of the Archbishop, and of which even a monarch might well be proud. His grace responded in a happy vein. After several remarks of a humorous nature which awoke hearty laughter from his hearers, he dealt with the more serious question in hand. He had been rather slow, he said, to accept the invitation to visit the Irish Exhibition owing to severe criticisms which had been passed upon it, but he was glad to say they were without foundation.

The Archbishop praised in unmeasured terms the entire Irish Exhibition. He had known Mr. Hanley in Kansas City, he said, and held him in high esteem. He hoped Mr. Hanley, who had gone deeply into his pocket to make the exhibition possible, would not only get his money back, but a good sum beside. The enterprise was a credit to the general exhibition. As a St. Louisian, he was proud; as an American, he was filled with joy; as an Irishman, he was beside himself. His grace then eulogized the genius of the Irish race. "Take Ireland from the map, he said, and you would remove from the stage, the bar, from science generally the most shining lights. Take Ireland from the map," he laughingly added, "and England herself would be in a bad predicament. She would have trouble in finding men to lead her armies—that is lead them to victory."

The stone work of the panels in the new Cathedral, the Archbishop promised, would be brought from Ireland. The vestments to be worn by the priests there and the chalices would be wrought by Irish hands, which were as sacred as any hands in the world. He congratulated the exhibit company on the size of its audience, saying that he had attended the most important congresses held in the exposition and none of them compared in size and enthusiasm with that attending these dedication ceremonies.

The splendid address of the Archbishop made a profound impression on the audience, which again gave vent to its enthusiasm as the distinguished speaker took his seat.

Mr. T. P. Gill, the secretary of the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction for Ireland, was the next speaker. Reviewing the industrial situation in Ireland he made an eloquent appeal for support. It was not contributions Ireland wanted, he said, but capital for investment. American methods of exploitation, which were the best in the world, were wanted. Ireland was now thoroughly awake to the importance of her industries. It was said that Irishmen governed every country but their own. He was happy to say that the time was not far distant when Irishmen would govern their own country.

Mr. Hanley, the promoter of the enterprise, and the president of the Irish Exhibit company, then came forward and received a wild ovation which lasted several minutes. He made a short address in which he assured the Irish people that no feature, except the most creditable, would be tolerated in the theatre or any other portion of the exhibition.

Irish songs were sung by Miss Marie Nardelle, Mr. McCormack and other members of the Irish Theatre company. After the closing anthems, "The Star-spangled Banner" and "Let Erin Remember the Days of Old," a photograph was taken of the group that had been sitting on the stage, and then they adjourned to a banquet, spread in the Irish house of parliament by President Hanley in honor of the occasion.

One hundred and fifty members of the uniformed rank of the A. O. H. acted as a guard of honor.

WAR GODS OF JAPAN.

Unnumbered stories are being published in Japan about Captain Hirose, who died in an attempt to "bottle up" the Russian fleet at Port Arthur and who has been proclaimed a "war god." A man who knew him in childhood says: "As a child the captain received with us the primary school instruction at the Kwansho school. The boy is father of the man; and even in those early days the boy Hirose distinguished himself far above his school fellows, both in play and in scholarship. It was he who was champion of the sport of sliding on the snow down Ebi hill. He never had his face stained with a dab of ink when we played the 'poetry cards' at his father's temporary residence, simply because he was never beaten even once. Then whenever we boys had exercises in certification his performance nearly always won the best mark, and even when they failed, at rare intervals, to come to that level of excellence they never fell below the standard of second best. In short, he was carried by an unconquerable spirit in anything he took a hand in."

"Hirose took great pains in the training of his body," says this same Japanese gossip. "While a student at the Kogyoku-sha he made it a rule to take a constitutional round the outer moat of the palace premises early every morning. It was not surprising that, with his appetite whetted by such vigorous exercise, he very often emptied by himself the whole contents of a boiled rice cask holding in it the portion of two or three people. He used to say that he had been admitted to the naval academy not by the strength of his scholarship but by virtue of his splendid physique, and he added that he failed to see any good in the practice of constantly poring over books with weakened health."

Jigoro Kano, who was Captain Hirose's teacher in jujitsu, tells one Japanese newspaper that this martial art was the captain's only source of amusement, and that he used to devote himself to the exercise with rare application. For instance, when he returned home from a long cruise, the next thing he would do after landing on shore was to come with his jujitsu suit to Kano's school and have as many bouts with his instructor as possible.

SIX THOUSAND CATHOLIC YOUNG MEN.

There were over six thousand marchers in this year's annual parade of the Catholic young men's societies of Liverpool. Great crowds of spectators gathered from all parts of the city to see the parade, and the scene as the whole array proceeded with banners flying and bands playing was enlightening and a credit to the Catholic body. In some quarters fears were entertained that the Protestant processions who have of late been so offensively active in Catholic parts of the city might present themselves at a disturbing element, but evidently, if discretion is absent when there is no likelihood of Catholic defense, the Protestant crusaders showed that they appreciated this virtue on this occasion, for they were neither seen nor heard on Sunday last, and everything passed off in the most orderly manner.

Every morning compose your soul for a tranquil day, and all through it be careful often to recall your resolution, and bring yourself back to it, so to say. If something discomposes you, do not be upset or troubled; but, having discovered the fact, humble yourself gently before God and try to bring your mind into a quiet attitude. Say to yourself: "Well, I have made a false step; now I must go more carefully and watchfully." Do this each time, however frequently you fall. When you are at peace use it profitably, making constant acts of meekness and seeking to be calm even in the most trifling things. Above all, do not be discouraged; be patient; wait; strive to attain a calm, gentle spirit.—De Sales.

"Man shall not live by bread alone." There are other ways of living besides that which comes by bread. A man will live by the word of God, by what God says to him, by what God means between Him and him, by the truth of being which the Father alone can reveal to His child, by the communion of love between them. Without the bread he will die, as men say; but he will not find that he dies. He will only find that the tent which hid the stars from him is gone, and that he can see the heavens.—George MacDonald.

The way to argue down a vice is, not to tell lies about it—to say that it has no attractions, when everybody knows that it has—but rather to let it make out its case, just as it certainly will in the moment of temptation, and then meet it with the weapons furnished by the Divine armory.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

God hath provided a sweet and quiet life for His children, could they improve and use it; a calm and firm conviction in all storms and troubles that are about them, however things go, to find content and be careful for nothing.—R. Leighton.

E. H. Airis, Pres. R. W. Nichol, Sec'y.
